the community

life and time and life . . .
beat out a pace and attempt to thrive . . .

. . . with intermingled everydayness of flowering love to people, to each other

. . . with nightmares infested with imagineless images of fear
. . . with constant, dizzy, misleading, yet leading, ugly anger

. . . , with constant, dizzy, misleading, yet leading, motion
. . . with shackles of barren, longing loneliness

. . . with answering understanding to teasing thoughts
. . . with soda bubbles of unrestrained joy

. . . with unpainted friendship blossoming in two-getherness time grasps at life.

the need is to share
do we dare?

—to be alive!

to you, mrs. moyers . . .

"i think it's her thoughtfulness to everyone that makes everyone love her."

"how can you look so perfect the whole day thru?"

"go talk to mrs. moyers about it, she'll understand."

"you have six weeks on medical floor with mrs. moyers? some people have all the luck!"

"i think she's the best instructor that has ever worked on this floor."

"she makes you feel like you're a capable member of mankind, instead of a stupid nut to be picked on."

"today on the floor, i was feeling so blah and that dear mrs. moyers bought me a cup of coffee!"

"come on down to my office tomorrow and i'll give you something for your cold."

"well, 'sloopy', it's 10:30 am—do you have your 9:00 meds charted yet?"

"don't feel so badly about it—everyone has their off days."

"anyone want a pepsi while we have conference?"

"you did very well!"

"i suppose if i asked you about your shoes—you'd say you're not getting another pair till graduation?"

"it won't be any chore—they're my girls."

"i guess it's because i like students."

capping class of 74

"why will i cherish my cap? my cap is a symbol of the care i give. it is white to express the cleaniness i strive to maintain within the hospital. it is placed neatly on my head to show the effectiveness of my work. the wide brim demonstrates my ever increasing knowledge. i will always be able to take pride in my cap, because it stands for what i want for my patients, to return to health and happiness."

excerpts from "what my cap means to me" by linda ebert, class of 1974

medical-surgical i

"i don't hear you when you get up in the morning, but the overhead light wakes me up."

"what do you mean i have to take the hem out of my uniform, i just finished hemming it."

"miss glick, what is xanthogranulomatosis!"

"remember, we are professional people with clinical smiles."

"but i know you remember it, we had it in class."

medical-surgical ii

"this will be due the third week of the circulatory unit!"

"we won't go into this—you'll get it in med-surg iii."

"because you're working with people."

"how much do you charge for two squirts of zepharin?"

"there are three people who haven't signed off their names on the little red bulletin board."

"we have two new admissions. where are the students?"

"continuity of patient care—six student nurses making rounds."

medical-surgical iii

" . . . and what time did you go to bed last night?"

"sympathy is your pain in my heart."

"it is highly suggested that you avail yourselves to the opportunity to read the folders of pertinent reference material."

"a p to prompt the qrs."

"what if we refused to do one of our care plans?"

"we won't go into this—you should've gotten it in med-surg ii."

"you will be responsible for the material listed on the first four pages of your unit outline for a quiz friday."

surgery

"12 hemostats, 8 kellys, 3 forceps—i'll never learn all these instruments."

"let me show you how to pass instruments. ouch!"

"your sponge count is correct, doctor."

"mr. todd, you're in the recovery room now."

"it sure doesn't look like the pictures!"

obstetrics

"it sure is feeding time, listen, they're crying!"

"don't you think the father should be in the labor room?"

"is this your first baby?"

"baby, if you want to go home you've got to eat."

"it's time to scrub, babies don't wait on us."

pediatric affiliation

"i want my rickle-pickle."

"hey, nurse—i gotta pee!"

"roast beef—1001 different ways."

"virginia is for lovers."

"after dark, be sure to have the 'geerd' walk you back from your 'keer'!"

"the hospitalized child—part nine."

"is there really a snake in the basement?"

"i never thought i'd miss rmh!"

"i had 16 kids, 9 iv's, 2 gastric feedings, and medications every hour!"

"do you know what that kid did to me?"

" 'cause i'm leaving on a jet plane."

"my iv is only five hours behind!"

psychiatric affiliation

"when you have finished with your cigarette, may i have the stub? i need a smoke."

"see that guy on tv? he's talking about me."

"anybody need a ride home this weekend? we only have seven so far in our car!"

"i forgot my meal ticket—may i sneak thru on yours?"

"you're new here—are you a patient?"

"it's been four weeks now and my one-to-one still won't talk to me."

"did you ever think you'd see the day you would be proud to be a student at rmh? no, but we have!"

"what ten defense mechanisms did your patient use in that statement?"

"we're as nutty as fruit cake."

team nursing

"when are we having conference today?"

"taxing one's potential increases one's ability."

"how do they expect me to wash 18 faces in 15 minutes?"

"speed and accuracy are the passwords."

"you write the admission note—i'll get the orders."

"24 hours in the fallout shelter—cold baked beans and no cigarettes."

. . . and the omega

three years past . . .

on the day of june sixteenth we entered the doors of rmh, with questioning eyes, wondering minds, and souls filled full with fright.

we spent the summer at madison, studying psychology and anatomy.
"ugh! you put the cadavers away today.
it was my turn yesterday!"

the summer, also, held lots more, remember the day of giving bed baths and learning how to make a corner;
yes, we were learning to be a nurse.

as the year continued and the leaves turned we bundled up and hiked to madison:
one day to chemistry and physiology,
and the other days spent in nutrition.

our work in the hospital increased now we actually got to pass trays.
we were becoming skilled in baths and beds,
and yes, still learning to be a nurse.

then the day long-awaited arrived.
family and friends came to watch as miss j. placed the white cap upon our heads, filled with pride and joy.

the grass turned from brown to green and classes at madison changed, too.
now we were becoming bacteriologists and enjoying the days in sociology.

with the corner stripes upon our cap was added responsibility and skill.
another class of freshmen entered and we finally realized—we were juniors.

as summer rolled around again,
no longer did we journey to madison.
our days were spent in the hospital and 101, learning to be a nurse.

specialities, long anticipated, started to occur, ob was the first for some—calming the mother-to-be through l&d, and then cuddling the baby in the nursery.

others went to the exciting area, hands were shaking and minds were confused our first scrub in surgery happened, but all relaxed when it was finally over.

our caps grew somewhat heavier as the stripe of the blue circled around them, it was really hard for us to realize but we had actually risen to seniors.

then we became experienced packers as we gathered our suitcases together and headed for children's in cincinnati, yes, we were still learning to be a nurse.

we learned that week-ends aren't always free as team nursing became our way of life; varied projects and disasters were studied,
including twenty-four hours in shelter.

again, we took to the long road but this time somewhat closer to home, as we entered the walls of st. e.'s.
yes, even in d.c. we were becoming a nurse.

back to rmh for one final round, med-surg iii thoroughly taxed our brains—care plans, drug cards, and trends;
but the end was drawing near.

not all time was spent in studies.
some found their lifetime partner as engagements were announced, weddings occurred; while others still search for mr. right.

strangers of the three years past have now become life-long friends, we've griped together over projects that interferred with spare time.

thanks go to the enduring patients,
and the willing instructors, who have helped us to learn the many tasks confronting a nurse.

and while thanks are being given—our parents and families deserve many for toleration of our changeable moods and encouragement when times got rough.

and now the day has finally come and three years past won't be forgotten, as we put on white uniforms and the fresh white caps with a black band.

yes, may twenty-seventh is finally here,
the doors of rmh are now behind us but the three years past are our future as we, the class of '72, are finally nurses.
